Did you know?

Excerpts from Treasure Island show programme articles by Andrew Lambert, David Cordingley and Tristan Gooley.

- Long John Silver and the crew in Treasure Island were based on the pirates who roamed the Caribbean in the early 18th century – the so-called Golden Age of pirates. The majority of these pirates were former sailors. Some had served on warships but most were former merchant seamen who had either been captured by pirates or had decided that pirate life was easier and more profitable than life on a merchant ship.
- Stars can be used to do all sorts of things, like help predict changes in the weather and tell the time, but most importantly for sailors, they can be used to navigate.
- The ‘Jolly Roger’ is the traditional English name for the flag flown by a pirate ship when it was about to attack. Most commonly, it has a white skull-and-crossbones symbol on a black background.
- The toilet facilities at sea were very primitive! Sailors used ‘seats of ease’ – a series of holes in exposed wooden platforms at the front of the ship. Constant waves hitting the front of the ship helped keep the ‘seats’ clean, and they also discouraged timid mariners, and especially landlubbers from using them.

National Theatre

At the National Theatre, we make world-class theatre that is entertaining, challenging and inspiring. And we make it for everyone.

We stage over 20 productions at our South Bank home in London each year. Our programme is broad and inclusive, appealing to the widest possible audiences with new plays, musicals, reimagined classics and work for young audiences. Our work is also seen in London’s West End, on tour across the UK and internationally.
